

Liesel Burisch

Bring Time

ISBN: 978-87-94311-04-5
EAN: 9788794311045

Liesel Burisch
Bring Time
Udstillingsperiode: 11.06.2022 - 07.08.2022

O-OVERGADEN
OVERGADEN neden vandet 7, 1414 København K, overgaden.org

Bring Time

FORORD

Efterfestens forgængelighed, foranderlighed, dens potentialer til at fejre de skrøbelige og midlertidige rum, er centrum for samtalen i Liesel Burischs første soloudstilling i Danmark – Bring Time – der vises på O-Overgaden hen over sommeren 2022. Udstillingen præsenterer nyproducerede værker i form af video, fotografi, musik og zines og tager udgangspunkt i Burischs personlige oplevelser i miljøet, såvel som arkivmateriale, manifester og akademiske tekster om queer klubkultur. Herfra undersøger Burisch efterfesten som firum og reflekterer over, hvordan et inkluderende klubliv kunne tage sig ud.

Udstillingen er skabt som en totalinstallation, der mimer ravefestens arkitektur med midlertidige stilladser og plakatplastrede vægge. Centralt er videoværket Never Stop, der vises på to store skærme og er filmet på forskellige barer, klubber og private hjem. I videoen møder vi karaktererne Don og Jess, der gennem dialog og dans viser os øjeblikke af festforberedelsernes intime langsomhed - friheden og fællesskabet i dansen og efterfestens dybe, drømmende snakke. De deler oplevelser fra klubmiljøer, og drømmer om at kunne udfolde sig frit uden begrænsninger, fordomme og naboklager. Deres bevægelser og fragmenterede samtaler blander sig med et bastungt, elektronisk technologdspor, der langsomt og hypnotisk fylder udstillingsrummet. Mens fortællingen om et andet af filmens dronefilmet på O – Overgaden – det modsatte blik: drømmen. Med sin dragende, næsten genfærdsagtige dans i O – Overgadens arkitektur, bevæger danseren Maji Claire sig fra kunsthallens skjulte mellemgange til de delvist tomme udstillingsrum for derefter at forsvinde helt.

Gennem Claires bevægelser og klare styring af kamerablikket, gennemfører hun en overbevisende indtagelse og queering af klubbens, men også kunstintuitionens, ekskluderende rum.

Bring Time dækker ved før- og efterfestens flydende og tidskrævende struktur. For Burisch er det her, venskaber dannes, konflikter heles og skuldrene kan sænkes efter en lang nat på dansegulvet – modsat selve festen, hvor musikken spiller højt, og forventninger skal indfries. Det er her, man kan få plads og ro til at starte en samtale om, hvad det er for en verden, vi ønsker os sammen. Som et riff over festinvitationens B.Y.O.B er Bring Time Burischs mantra for den gode efterfest: hav tiden med – giv dig tid til at finde dig selv og være den du vil.

Nærværende udgivelse er del af en publikationsrække, som O-Overgaden, siden 2021, har produceret som et selvstændigt og skräddersyet teknisk eller visuelt supplement til kunstnernes udstillinger. Udgivelserne er muliggjort gennem støtte fra Augustinus Fonden, som skal have en hjertelig tak. Jeg vil gerne takke Statens Kunstmuseum, Stiftung Funksfonds og Øens Murerfirma for deres uundværlige støtte til udstillingen og vores dygtige grafiske designere fra fanfare; César Rogers og Miquel Hervás Gómez for deres smukke arbejde. Mange tak til Justin Hunt og Lisa Arellano for deres tekstdrag, der på forskellige måder reflekterer over queer- klubbens mulighedsrum, historier og arkiver. En stor tak også til O-Overgadens in-house redaktør Nanna Friis, der har redigeret denne publikation og til O-Overgaden øvrige team, der sammen med Liesel har muliggjort udstillingen. En stor og hjertelig tak til Liesel Burisch for så stærkt at markere vigtigheden i de inkluderende fællesskaber og for at afvise normative, undertrykkende kulturer, hvor racisme, diskrimination, homofobi og socialt og kropsligt stigma florerer – ikke mindst i nattelivet.

Aukje Lepoutre Ravn,
interim leder, O – OVERGADEN

HVOR ALT DET SPÆNDENDE SKER

NÅR VI TALER OM EFTER- FESTER

Justin Hunt

TOM SNAK

Okay, klubben er modestedet og katalysatoren og... jeg vil ikke sige chille for det lyder så forfærdeligt, men altså, at chille fordi det er når folk chiller, at de vigtige ting udvikler sig

– Andrew Weatherall (1991)<sup>1</sup>

I et promotion-interview for det britiske pladeselskab Boy's Own Records taler DJ og producer Andrew Weatherall om nattelivets voksede betydning for den kreative og kulturelle industri. Fra at opfatte klubben som en primær katalysator for etableringen af nye, sociale former for kulturforbrug, kan udvikle nye springer han hurtigt videre til at pege på efterfestens potentielle – det sted man kan chille – til at skabe andre slags kreative kulturer og til at ændre vores kulturelle landskab. Han mener, at det er her, til efterfesten, at "alt det spændende sker".<sup>2</sup>

For Weatherall er det vigtigste, der sker i efterfestens rum samtalen. I interviewet understreger han, hvordan man ikke går i byen for at snakke: man går i byen for at indtage et skønt mix af kulturelle komponenter, mens det først er senere, når man når til chill-delen, at man rent faktisk kan finde rum til at tale med andre, der har delt kluboplevelsen og også kan forestille sig nye muligheder. Med disse muligheder mener han eksempelvis nye tøjmærker, pladeselskaber eller relationer mellem producenter og musikere. Denne iværksætterkultur til efterfesten entreprenørskab interesserer mig, og det samme gør hans tøvende brug af begrebet "at chille".

Hvorfor tøve med at overveje de produktive muligheder der ligger i at slappe af? Er det virkelig kun tom snak?

AT CHILLE

Vi joker alle sammen med, hvordan ingen knalder til de her efterfester, og de steder vi hænger ud har traditionelt været steder, hvor vores kroppe kunne komme sig ovenpå mængderne af alkohol og stoffer og dans – i hvert fald for de af os der jævnligt tager på klub og til lange weekendfester. Efterfesten har været et sted, hvor festen kunne fortsætte, mens vi faldt til ro sammen. Denne "traditionelle" opfattelse af efterfest og det at chille finder genklang i "The Chemsex Study", hvor der gøres brug af følgende definition af netop "efterfest-chill":

Den traditionelle forståelse af efterfesten refererer til en måde at socialisere og slappe af på, mens effekten af stoffer og alkohol aftager fra det primære event. Traditionelt bliver efterfesten snarere opfattet som et social over en seksuel event. Nu bruges begrebet som regel til at beskrive privatfester efter klubben, der involverer fortsat stofindtag og seksuel adfærd.<sup>3</sup>

Her laver ordet "tradition" noget komplekst grænsearbejde i forhold til en definerende praksis, der forsøger at løsrive stoffer og sex fra nogen som helst ide om fritid. Grænsearbejde inddeler forsøgene på samtidig at skabe og nedbryde begrænsninger, afgrænsninger og andre former for lagdeling af vores epistemologiske områder. Efter begrebet først blev anvendt videnskabeligt, er det blevet en brugbar ramme for sociologiens diskurser, når vi forsøger at afkode forskellige former for modkulturer og subkulturer. I denne sammenhæng refererer "tom snak" til et performativt møde mellem kroppe, der søger sammenhæng. En binær opfattelse af jeget/den anden ligger naturligvis lige for, og det samme gør relationer mellem inden-for-gruppen/udenpå - eller lignende konkurrerende hierarkier indenfor klasse eller kulturelle genrer ("Jeg ved ikke, hvad jeg synes om det her soveværelsestechno; hvad med dig?"). At nævne tradition her er et forsøg på at stabilisere en normativ grænse mellem dem, der hygger sig stille og roligt, og dem der gerne vil feste, længe efter festen er slut. Denne form for grænsearbejde, særligt i ovennævnte undersøgelses kontekst, demonstrerer tydeligt en manglende evne hos dem, der er kritisk engagerede i vores kroppe, til ikke at moralisere og i stedet tage sig af kroppene på måder, der mere grundlæggende kunne være et modsvar til kulturen som sådan.

Jeg vil gerne lave en queer-læsning af Weatheralls toven – hans avisning og efterfølgende accept af den her form for chill – som en måde at svare igen på, der rhizomatiske ændrer, hvordan vi forholder os til afslapningspraksisser som eksempelvis efterfester. Derudover vil jeg optrævle, hvordan vi forsøger at marginalisere disse aktiviteter i forhold til vores adgang til dens strukturer – og vores arbejde for at opretholde dem.

AT SVARE IGEN

I sin nye, etnografiske gennemgang af efterfest-klubber i USA bemærker sociolog Terry Williams, at netop klubber og rummene for efterfester spiller en vigtig rolle i ethvert samfund – de "faciliterer en ny måde at 'svare igen' på, en måde at kontrollere den vrede mange føler" i deres respektive, socio-kulturelle situationer.<sup>4</sup> Williams mener, at det at svare igen giver kræfterne tilbage til dem, der er blevet moralsk udstød fra sociale hierarkier på grund af – i dette tilfælde – deltagelse i rekreativt stofbrug, sex og gambling. Han peger på, hvordan omsorgen fra para-institutionelle strukturer som eksempelvis efterfest-klubberne støtter, at denne slags rekreation ikke bliver et misbrug (præfikset 'para' betyder i denne sammenhæng ved siden af eller imod). Han udfolder desuden de forskellige semantiske strukturer, der udgør de efterfest-klubber, han besøger, og han forsøger at få greb om, hvordan de "endeløse samtaler" både han selv og Weatherall refererer til, kan skabe nye former og muligheder for subjektivitet.

Denne form for 'svaren igen' minder om, hvordan kunstner og akademiker/forsker Liesel Burisch og jeg selv i forskellige kontekster har skrevet om queer livsverdener og deres relationer til efterfesten. I teksten "After-Party" begyndte jeg at skitsere, hvordan nattelivsforbrug kan transformere queer-erfaringer gennem bærende, om end ikke-omsorgsfulde, former for vidensudveksling.<sup>5</sup> I Burisch' nye udgivelse How Not to Exclude<sup>6</sup> bliver efterfesten artikuleret som et redskab til understrege/lindre traumerne ved seksuel og kapitalistisk vold. Jeg vil tale mere om Burisch' arbejde, men først vil jeg opføre lidt britisk queervold: Jeg vil tale om Margaret Thatcher.

1. Andrew Weatherall interviewed as part of "Boys Own Records feature," Snub TV, ep. 8, by DEF II youth strand, BBC2, 1991, available at youtube.com/watch?v=\_vqf9DDHqUg&ab\_channel=jimmmod123, transcribed with emphasis added by the author.

2. Ibid.

3. Adam Bourne et al, "The Chemsex Study: Drug use in sexual settings among gay and bisexual men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Sigma Research, London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine, March 2014), p.6.

4. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie: Inside an After-Hours Club (New York: Columbia University Press, 2020), p.16.

5. R. Justin Hunt, "After the After-Party," in Urban Pamphleteer, no. 7 (July 2018), available at urbanpamphleteer.org/lgbtq-night-time-spaces-past-present-future.

6. Liesel Burisch, How Not to Exclude (Berlin: Gorilla Milk, 2022), available at shop.gorilla-milk.net/product/how-not-to-exclude.

*Det vi har brug for er at ramme arrangørernes profit.
Dette burde afskrække vanvidet.*
– Margaret Thatcher (1989)

Et par år før det overhovedet var muligt for Weatherall at forestille sig kollaborativ kulturproduktion foregå i den lidt omtagede comedown-tilstand, der er efterfestens, skrev Margaret Thatcher et brev, der bekraeftede, at regeringen ville skride til handling i forhold til at kontrollere rave-kultur. Den tidligere dommer Gerald Coke (ingen smørrede grin her... ingen) skrev til Thatcher om en ”følelse af kollektiv vrede og hjælpeløshed over at politiet intet kunne gøre, fordi det var en privat fest” han befandt sig i nærheden af et sted på landet i England.<sup>7</sup> Thatcher så muligheder. Ved at profitere på fritidsmarkedet gennem bevillinger og beskatning (ved siden af beslaglæggelser og anholdelser) kunne hun skabe nye former for kulturproduktion. Forskeren Henry R. L. John har argumenteret for, hvordan nattelivskultur (raves og de større og mindre klubbevægelse der fulgte) ”skabte en økonomisk sfære, der kan ses som selve paradigmet for Thatchers økonomiske frihed.”<sup>8</sup> At fester og politik finder ustabil fælles grund lader til at handle om at profitere på følelsen af at skabe noget kollektivt.

Cokes følelse af ”kollektiv vrede og hjælpeløshed” i mødet med en fest afspejler så sigende den ”vrede og afmagt”, som dem der deltager i festen, ofte oplever. De mange ”forestillede marginaliseringer”<sup>9</sup> er endnu et nøgleksempel på spil i destilleringen det grænsearbejde, der er af efterfesternes kulturelle effekt. På begge sider af denne grænse findes en frustreret og symbolsk rettighedsberøvet ”anden”. Begge deltager i ”festen” gennem deres simultant privilegerede og marginaliserede positioner. Cokes ”traditionelle” livsverden er truet af en privatfest, der ikke er tojet af tidens normative regimer. Han føler sig marginaliseret fra sit eget centrum, og understreger samtidig sin privilegerede position. For dem der er til festen (henholdsvis Cokes fest og Williams’ fest), sikres individet gennem den legitimerede deltagelse i festen; det her undertrykkende privilegie muliggøres kun gennem den marginaliserede praksis, som efterfesten er.

ALLE ER INVITERET

I Liesel Burischs zine How Not to Exclude (volume 2 og 3) skiller et spørgsmål sig ud under overskriften ”The Afterparty”: ”Hvad ville ske, hvis alle er inviteret til festen – endda også til efterfesten?”<sup>10</sup>

Den første del af dette spørgsmål opfordrer os til at overveje forskellige udtryk for valg, former for selektion, kontrol og segrerering, som opretholder den tilsyneladende inklusion, der kendtegner nattelivet. Natteliv er båret af en unik indsats for at forestille sig det marginaliserede, hvorigennem specifikke privilegier tilbydes en bestemt mængde kroppe med henblik på at isolere deres begær og ekskludere andre.<sup>11</sup>

Den form for isolation og ekskludering bliver endnu mere synlig gennem de strukturer, der præger et steds nedlukning (både de rutineprægede – ”sidste omgang” – og mere strategiske - #savenightlife), og hvordan nye sociale arenaer udvikler sig lige i hælene på lukningerne (både rutinepræget – ”hvor er efterfesten?” – og reguleret ”døgnåbne byer/sene bevillinger). Her peger jeg også på de strukturelle grænser, som de, der bruger nattelivet, navigerer efter for at finde ud af, hvor og hvornår vi kan chille. Hvordan festede du, da klubberne lukkede under Covid-19? Hvordan bidrog denne form for fest til at styrke eller underminere din selvforståelse? Blev du nogensinde inviteret til en fest? Kom du til den?

Burisch udvider sin invitation: ”[Efterfesten] er for dem, der ikke har et hjem – eller ikke vil hjem til det. Det er for dem, der ikke ved, at de har et hjem.”<sup>12</sup>

For dem af os der mistede vores ”hjem”, da klubberne lukkede under pandemien, og hvor det vi havde tilbage, var arbejdet med at finde nye måder at feste på, er denne form for invitation velkommen. Jeg tover kun med at påpege, at den slags efterfester muligvis kræver en mere reflekteret tilgang til det grænsearbejde, der ligger i at chille.

7. ”Real reason Thatcher tried to ban acid house parties revealed,” Sky News, 30 December 2016, news.sky.com/story/real-reason-thatcher-tried-to-ban-acid-house-parties-revealed-10711546.

8. Henry R.L. John, ”UK Rave Culture and the Thatcherite Hegemony, 1988–94,” Cultural History, vol. 4, no. 2 (September 2015), p.172.

9. Pepper G. Glass, ”Doing Scene: Identity, Space, and the Interactional Accomplishment of Youth Culture,” Journal of Contemporary Ethnography, vol. 41, no. 6 (August 2012), p.703.

10. Burisch 2022.

11. Philip Hadfield, ”From Threat to Promise: Nightclub ‘Security’, Governance and Consumer Elites”, British Journal of Criminology, vol.48 (July 2008), pp.429–47.

12. Burisch 2022.

OM QUEER-KLUBBER OG ARKIVER

ET ESSAY TIL TERENCE

Lisa Arellano

På en tur til min hjemby for nylig kørte jeg og min bedste ven Terence forbi natklubben City Nightclub – en klub for homoseksuelle i alle aldre – hvor vi tilbragte alle vores ungdoms weekender. Bygningen er en tom møbelbutik nu, det falmede skilt og bogstaverne på vinduerne vidner om en anden fortid end vores. Vi husker en gade med en bas så dyb, at vinduerne rystede mens vi stod i kø – indenfor var der snoede gange, fyldt med grafitti og røg fra nelliike cigaretter. Meget af stedet har indlejret sig i os som egne og fælles ideer om, hvilken slags homoseksuelle vi var dengang, og hvem vi nu er som queer voksne – en balancegang mellem individuel og det forskerne kalder ”kollektiv” erindring.

At steder forsvandt på et tidspunkt i løbet af 1990’erne har altid gået os på ( mig) – som køns- og seksualitetshistoriker – i en sådan grad, at jeg for nylig skrev et essay om stedets vigtighed i en bredere, queer-historisk kontekst. Jeg argumenterede for, at en queer-klub var en bastion af anti-stat og proto-queer radikalisme, særligt i de neokonservative og AIDS-udsatte 1980’ere. Dette argument er retrospektivt, baseret på analyser og teori jeg ikke kunne have forestillet mig på daværende tidspunkt.

Jeg synes argumentet holder, og jeg ved også, at min aktie i det ikke udelukkende var intellektuel. Det sted gjorde mig til den, jeg er i dag... Den knogleklirreden bas var en fysisk manifestation af en endnu mere magtfuld, selvopfundet social virkelighed. Min bedste ven og jeg voksede op i en lille, konservativ by – på weekendtener mønstrede vi al den coolness, vi kunne og bevægede os ind mod klubben fra vores forstadshjem. Vi mærkede klubbens magi ret stærkt. Mørket, den hamrende bas og en hvirvlende storbyungdom fik os til føle os som nogen, der havde fundet en portal ind til en Dead or Alive-video.

Det var ikke bare det, at homoseksualiteten var mulig her – selvom det i sig selv var usædvanligt nok i et konservativt hjørne af USA i 1985 – det var det, at alt virkede muligt. Der skulle gå flere år før José Muñoz hjalp mig med at forstå, at ”visse måder at være queerborger på indbefatter en forventningsfuld synliggørelse af en queer verden, tegn på en faktisk eksisterende queer virkelighed, en kerne af politiske mulighedsrum indenfor rammerne af en latterliggende, heteroseksuel virkelighed”. I vores lille, ekstatiske hjørne af verden oplevede vi noget af det queer-utopiske.

Historikerne kan – det kan vi ihvertfald fald godt lide at tro – gøre fortiden synlig igen. Ved at finde kilder og dokumenter og forbinde dem med hinanden i narrative beskrivelser, kan vi bringe de døde tilbage, de forsvundne frem i lyset. Da jeg skrev om City Nightclub, ønskede jeg at vise folk det her forsvundne sted, at forklare andre mennesker, der går op i queer-historie, hvorfor netop denne klub havde været så vigtig. Men kilderne og historierne var svære at finde, særligt dem der indkapslede mine egne minder og forestillinger om stedet.

I løbet af min research om City Nightclub fandt jeg ud af, at der havde været meget på spil i forbindelse med klubbens nedlukning, skiftende konflikter med det lokale politi. At klubben blev udsat for en række (unødvendige?) magtanvendelser og indblandinger var typisk for den tids queer-venues, specielt dem der henvendte sig specifikt til nonbinære personer og/eller fattige og/eller ikke-hvide-queer-fællesskaber.

Det primært mindrårige klientel på City Nightclub var uimodstæltig for de lokale myndigheder, der forsøgte at kontrollere unge mennesker og deres seksualitet. Det gode ved denne perfide granskning skulle dog vise sig at blive en tyk mappe med dokumenter på lokalarkivet, der afdækkede den juridiske kamp mellem klubbens indehavere og de lokale myndigheder. Ved hjælp af disse dokumenter opdagede jeg, hvordan klubbens ejer og stamgæster blev svinet til og bevidst fejlfremstillet af betjentene som en flok satanister med et uhæmmet narkomisbrug. Rapporter fra undercover politioperationer gav særligt levende og detaljerede beviser for ejerens vedvarende beskyldninger om, at klubben var blevet uretfærdigt udsat for hetz, fordi den var queer.

1. Cruising Utopia: The Then and There of Queer Futurity (New York: NYU Press, 2009), 49.

Dette er absolut ikke usædvanligt – ofte er vores viden om forsvundne queer-venues hentet fra magtudovernes dokumenter, og jo mere aggressiv magtanvendelse jo mere udførlige optegnelser.<sup>2</sup> Men det er også muligt at finde dokumenter, der antyder tidlige former for politisk organisering blandt queer-personer i disse juridiske kampe for retten til forsamling, måder hvorpå queermiljøerne ydede modstand mod undertrykkelsen på klubber og barer.<sup>3</sup> Der havde været en vis modstand, da City Nightclub stod overfor nedlukning – protestmarcher, avisannoncer og breve til lokalpolitiet beviste unikke betydning i den forståelse, at de var vigtig for unge queer-personer. Men disse dokumenter gav ikke det fulde overblik over, hvad der foregik inde på City Nightclub, klubbens nærmest frelsende, livsnødvendige kraft. Alt det arkivmateriale jeg indsamlede i løbet af min historietekniske research lykkedes ikke med at dokumentere den fortid, jeg huskede.

Heldigvis fik jeg i løbet af min research opbakning fra klubbens legendariske indehaver Lanny Swerdlow. Både han og klubbens fotograf besvarede mine endeløse spørgsmål, pegede mig i retning af mulig dokumentation og fandt videooptagelser fra klubbens sidste dage. Det var det tætteste, jeg kom på noget, der formidlede stedets fortid. Der fandtes andre fotos og endda videoer fra andre år, men disse kilder blev grundigt bevogtet af de mennesker, der lå inde med dem. Dette var til dels bare udtryk for queer-miljøets interne dramaer, forudsigelige uenigheder om hvis insiderstatus der var gav mest genlyd eller havde holdt længst. Men der var også forståelig bekymring for de unge queer personer, som uvidende var blevet dokumenteret på disse optagelser.

Det etiske statement, som Amanda Regan og Eric Gonzaba lagde op på deres hjemmeside i forbindelse med deres queer-mapping-projekt, er brugbart i denne forbindelse. Der står: "Eftersom projektet er centreret omkring homoseksuel, biseksuel, transkønnet og queer kultur stræber Mapping the Gay Guides-teamet efter at gøre vores projekt etisk ansvarligt, at respektere privatlivet, perspektiverne og værdigheden blandt de mennesker og de historier, vores arbejde reflekterer".<sup>4</sup> Ingen af os fra City Nightclub kunne have forudset, at vores ungdoms queer-overdåd ville blive et "dokument" eller en "kilde" for historikere på et senere tidspunkt; faktisk følte vi os netop sikre på City Nightclub, fordi vi var usynlige for verden. Min indre historikers jagt på "bedre" dokumentation kolliderede i dette tilfælde med en selvpolevet forståelse for visse queer-fællesskabers hellige, hemmelige natur.

Der findes mange og gode grunde til at forbinde svindende bar- og klubkulturer i queer-miljøer med udviklingen af et digitalt queer-liv. Hvor barer og klubber engang var nødvendige for, at vi kunne finde og være sammen med hinanden, er det ikke nu længere tilfældet.<sup>5</sup> Men digitale projekter er muligvis vores bedste chance i forhold til at huske forsvundne steder og skabe nye, kollektivt fremskaffede "dokumenter", der mere sandfærdigt indfanger disse nu forsvundne former for kollektivt queer-liv. Queering the Map (fra Toronto) er et særligt interessant eksempel på potentialet i at arbejde med kollektiv erindring. Projektet beder brugerne om geografisk at placere forskellige queer-begivenheder; "alt fra direkte, aktivistiske handlinger til en samtale om foretrukne pronominer, fra flirtende blikke til weekendlange sexfester; det hele er en del af projektet om at gøre rum mere queer. Queer-historie er vigtig, og de ældre mennesker i miljøet opfordres til at tilføje steder og tidspunkter til det her kort og på den måde berige vores kollektive erindring."<sup>6</sup> Resultatet af denne usædvanlige invitation er et globalt, digitalt kort med en betagende, om end varierende, tæthed – de største og mindste øjeblikke af fysisk queer-tilstedeværelse kortlagt ved hjælp af virtuelle knappenåle. Denne pastiche af rumlig queer-erindring (i forskellige skalaer) kan være et supplement til de mere traditionelle arkivformer, og den kan muliggøre en mere effektiv indramning af de fragmenterede, varierede historier om queer-liv og -miljøer.

Man kunne også, på samme måde som Jack Halberstam, begynde at opfatte arkivet på nye måder. Halberstam skriver: "Arkivet er ikke bare et depot; det er også en kulturelt relevant teori, en måde at skabe kollektiv erindring og en kompleks optegnelse over queeraktiviteter".<sup>7</sup> Måske er min barndomsven og jeg også et arkiv, fulde og nostalgiske efter vores forgaves køretur – dette "os" der opstod i løbet af vores tid på City Nightclub er et andet slags dokument. Vores fælles erindringsarbejde er måske godt tjent med, at vi begynder at opfatte "arkivet" på grundlæggende nye, bredere måder og at opfatte vores (voksende) queer-miljø som et kompliceret sammensurium af dokumentation af vores fortid.

Men det er vigtigt, at vi benytter os af disse påstande om vores miljøer med omtanke. Queer-klubber er komplicerede historiske rum, de omfatter både miljøets bedste og værste udtryk. Christine Hanhardt minder os om, at "idealet om et fællesskab defineres ikke bare af dem, det inkluderer, men også af dem, det holder udenfor; ved at ændre definitionerne af homoseksuelle, biseksuelle, transkønnede og queer-identiteter og igennem konflikter om hvad den bedste, mest passende og værdifulde anvendelse af LGBTQ-synlighed er".<sup>8</sup> Nostalgi kan være farlig, når vi længes, eller når vi husker et sted, et rum, et fællesskab, der er væk, kommer vi for nemt til at ignorere vores forskelligheder – både ideer om "kollektiv noget vi kan kalde sig prioriteringen af" dengang og nu. Snaevre erindring" kan "antyde homoseksisme – det vil det homoseksuelle over andre identitetsmarkører."<sup>9</sup>

For kvinder, transpersoner eller ikke-hvide queer-personer har queer-venues nogle gange været steder, hvor følelsen af eksklusion har overskygget følelsen af at høre til. Måske tager vi mest hensyn til vores fortid ved at huske rummeligt – og ved at tage den forskelligartede dokumentation af vores historie seriøst, både i officielle og uofficielle arkiver. Men at forpligte sig til "kulturel relevans" på den måde Halberstam gør det, må også betyde, at vi er villige til at holde fast og give slip i et balanceret omfang, at anerkende hvordan vores fremtider ikke skal defineres af disse fortider. Når vi længes efter dem, glemmer vi det ekskluderende og begrænser vores evne til at forestille os nye steder og rum – nogle der kan være mere fremmende for dem, vi er nu.<sup>10</sup>

2. Anna Lvovsky, Vice Patrol, Cops, Courts, and the Struggle over Urban Gay Life before Stonewall (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2021).

3. Marc Stein, Rethinking the Gay and Lesbian Movement (New York: Routledge, 2012) 60.

4. mappingthegayguides.org/ethics

5. Jen Jack Gieseking, "LGBTQ Spaces and Places," LGBTQ America: A Theme Study of Lesbian, Gay Bisexual, Transgender and Queer History, Mega Springate, ed. (National Park Service: Department of the Interior, 2016).

6. queeringthemap.com

7. Judith Halberstam, In a Queer Time and Place: Transgender Bodies, Subcultural Lives (New York: NYU Press, 2005).

8. Christine Hanhardt, "Making Community: The Places and Spaces of LGBTQ Collective Identity Formation," LGBTQ America: A Theme Study of Lesbian, Gay Bisexual, Transgender and Queer History, Mega Springate, ed. (National Park Service: Department of the Interior, 2016), 15-4.

9. Miranda Joseph, Against the Romance of Community (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2002), 18.

10. Gregory Samantha Rosenthal, Living Queer History: Remembrance and Belonging in a Southern City (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2021).

Kunstneren ønsker at takke:

DE MEDVIRKENDE

Maji Claire
Cajsa Godée
Don Jegosah
Myriam Lucas
Toke Martins
Madeleine Ngoma
Jesseline Preach

HOLDET

Lydmix: Patrick Bech Madsen
DoP Copenhagen: Mik Dahl
DoP Berlin: Alcuin Stevenson
Drone Berlin: Can Töpfer
Still photography: Karin Salathé
Exhibition Design: Edi Winarni
Score: Danartono

TAK TIL

Sara Gaardbo, Kristina Stoltz, Justin Hunt,
Lisa Arellano, Sasha Douglas-Nares,
Eva Riis, Peter Voss-Knude,
Michael Burisch, Matiss Dauge, Manu,
Denice & Bernando Salazar de Sousa, Sophie
Burisch, Marie Mathilde Hansen,
Kat Staub & Stefan Kunzmann

SÆRLIG TAK TIL

Jan Elving, Poul Valsted og Øens Murerfirma

Trykt i 150 eksemplarer

↑ Video still, Never Stop, Liesel Burisch

↑ Video still, Never Stop, Liesel Burisch

← ↓ Video still, Never Stop, Liesel Burisch

↓ Video Still, prepostpregame, Liesel Burisch

next page → Video still, Never Stop, by Karin Salathé for Liesel Burisch

When you notice that you bring a completely different energy into the space.

next page → Video still, Never Stop, by Karin Salathe for Liesel Burisch

↓ Video still, Never Stop, by Karin Salathe for Liesel Burisch

↑ Double Arches, by Karin Salathe for Liezel Burrisch

↓ Production still, Never Stop, by Karin Salathe for Liezel Burrisch

as a transactional relationship where some give space for others
who they enjoy having in their domestic space, feeling part of a lifeworld for a moment

as apathy to the domestic space of the host

as finally a space
where we can meet across groups

as lying down surrounded by the joy and calm of others

as a space for after care

as a site of harm
not only care

as in rebuilding the subject
after erotic abuse

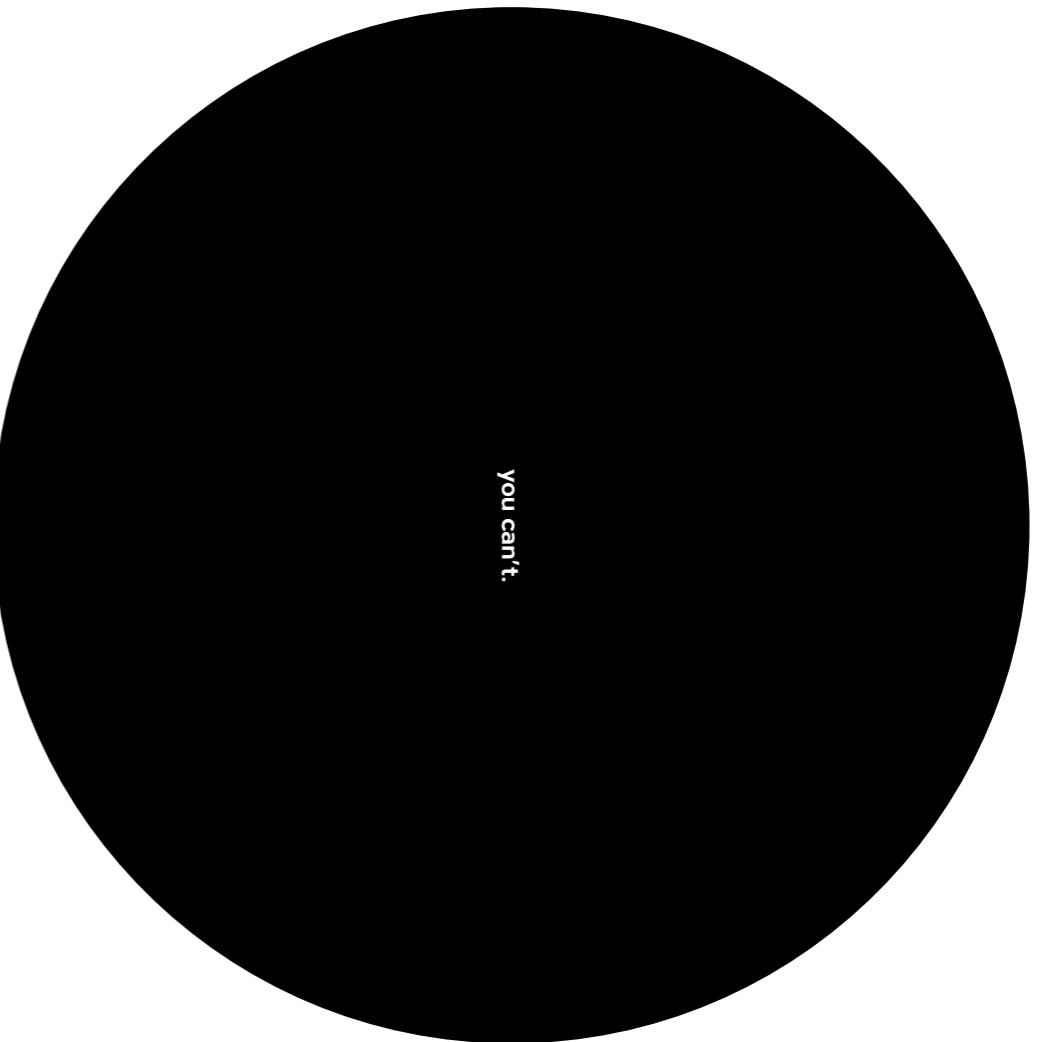

as in tending to wounds

as in needing to be part of the event to get the aftercare

as undoing normative timekeeping

as where the liability of the club ends

as mourning the critical high as readopting your outside reality
Thursday afternoon self

→ Liesel Burrisch, How Not To Exclude, Risograph-printed zinc, 2022

↑ Video still, Never Stop, Liesel Burrisch

Sara Gairdno, Kristina Stoltz, Justin Hu
Lisë Arrellano, Sasha Douglas-Nares,
Eva Riss, Peter Voss-Knudc,
Michael Burtsch, Matisse Daugé, Manu,
Deric & Bernando Salazar de Souza, Sophie
Burtsch, Marie Mathilde Hanesen,
Kat Staub & Stefan Kunzmann
AND A SPECIAL THANK YOU FOR THEIR EXTRAORDINARY SUPPORT TO
Jan Elving, Paul Valsted og Øens Murerfrim

THE PRODUCTION TEAM
Sound Mix: Patrick Bech Madsen
Dop: Copernagén: Mik Dahl
DOP: Belkin: Alcuin Stevensson
Droner Befilm: Can Topfer
Still photography: Karin Salathé
Exhibition Design: Eidi Wimarini
Score: Danartoño

THE CAST
Maji Claire
Cajsa Godee
Don Jegoosah
Myram Lucas
Toke Martins
Madcliffe Ngoma
Jesseline Preach

The artist wishes to mention:

- Printed in edition of 150 copies
- The publication is supported by: Augustinus Funden
- Printed at: Raddräger, Amsterdam
- Typegraphy: Glossy Magazine, Bold Decisions
- Graphic design: fanfare
- Photos: Anders Sune Berg, Karin Salahé, Liesel Burisch and Christian Brems
- Staten Kunstmuseum, Stirfuring Kunstfond
- The exhibition is supported by:

Exhibition Period: n.06.2022 - 07.08.2022
ISBN: 978-87-94511-04-5
EAN: 9788794511045
Editor & Translation: Nanna Friis
Copy Editing: Susannah Worth
Text: Lisa Arellano, Justin Hunt,

Exhibition period: 11-09-2022 - 28-09-2022

OVERGADEN
OVERGADEN

A cluster of five stylized, black, curved shapes resembling hills or clouds. The shapes are arranged in a roughly triangular formation, with one shape at the top center and four below it, creating a sense of depth or a landscape.

6. Queering the Map, queeringshemeap.com

- 5. Jen Jack Gieseking, "LGBTQ Spaces and Places: Bisexual, Transgender and Queer History (National Park Service): Department of the Interior, 2016, https://go.usa.gov/xgq3c

3. Marc Stein, Rethinking the Gay and Lesbian Movement (New York: Routledge, 2012), p.60.

4. Amanda Regan and Eric Gonzaea,
“A Statement on Ethics”, Mapping the Gay Guides mapлага-geavañides-ore-ethics-10-February-2012

2. Anna Lwovsky, Vice Parrot, Cops, Courts, and the Struggle over Urban Gay Life before Stonewall (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2021).

We might also think, as Jack Halberstam does, about the archive in new ways. Halberstam writes: "The archive is not simply a repository; it is also a theory of cultural relevance, a construction of collective memory and a complex record of queer activity." Perhaps this friend and I, drunk and reminiscing hours after the fruitless drive-by, are also an archive—the "us" made by our time at City Nightclub forming a document of difference kind. Our individual and relational survival is surely a testament to City Nightclub's constitutive impact and force. Our memory work may be well served by thinking about "the archive" in truly expansive way our (evolving) community as a complicated cross-hatch of documents about our past.

The project asks users to geo-locate moments of queerness; "anything from direct action activism to a conversation expressing preferred pronouns, from filtering glances to weekend long sex parties all are part of the project of queer space. Queer history matters, and elders of the community are enriching our collective memory." The results of this extraordinary memory. The result of a digital global map of comingling, if not varying, density—the largest and smallest moments of queer spatial existence remebered by virtual pins. This pastiche of (differently scaled) queer spatial memories can supplement more traditional archival forms, enabling us to more effectively capture the fragmented and varied history of queer life and community.

I was lucky to have the support of the clubs' management, along with the clubs' videographer, answering my research questions, directed me toward possible documents and pointed up video footage from the clubs' final days. This would be the closest I would come to anything that conveyed the venue's past. There were other photographs and even videos from clubs' final days. This would be the closest I would come to anything that conveyed the venue's past. Other years, but the sources were closely guarded by the people who held drama—predictably, was just queer-family. Insideer status was important concerns about the young, queer people statement posted on the website for Amanda Rodriguez Gonzales' queer digital mapping team useful here. It reads: "Since [the] project is centered on the culture of gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and queer people, the Mapping the Gay Guides team makes our project ethically responsible, respects to make our project ethically responsible, respects the privacy, perspectives, and dignity of those who stories are reflected within our work."<sup>4</sup> None of City Nightclub because we were invisible to the larger world. My historians' quest for "better documents collided, in this instance, with an experience of queer life. If bars and clubs were once nec-

There are many and good reasons to attribute the decline of queer bar and club culture to the rise of digital queer life. If bars and clubs were once nec-for us longer to find and be with each other, it best so. But digital projects may be hope for remembrance lost space that more truly capture now-absent forms of queer life. Queering the Map (out of Toronto) an especially compelling example of the possibility of shared memory work.

This is not altogether unusual—we often know what we know about disappearance documents of enforcement; the more aggressive enforcement, the more extensive records.<sup>2</sup> We can also find documents that trace early expression of queer political organization in the legal battles against the repression at queer clubs and bars.<sup>3</sup> There have been some pushback when City Nightclub had closure—protect markets, newspaper editorials, letters to the police department offered evidence the clubs' singular importance to queer people. But these documents did not capture what had happened inside. Queer nightlife—the salvia, life-constituting Negritude failed to document the past that I remember.

FOR TOLERANCE AN ESSAY

ON GAY CLUBS AND ARCHIVES

before Jose Mijoz would help me understand that "certain performances of queer citizenship contain... an actually existing queer reality, a kernel of political possibility within a stillfullying heterosexual present." In our small, escapist corner of the world, we were Historians can, we like to believe, make the past reappear—by finding sources and documents and linking them together into narrative descriptions we can return the dead to life, the dispensed to presence. In writing about City Nightclub, I wanted to show people this gone-place, to explain to other people who care about the queer past why this club had been so important. But the sources and documents were difficult to locate, particularly ones that captured my own memories and ideas about the club.

In the course of my research on City Highclub, I learned that the club closed following some high-stakes, volatile conflicts with the local city police. That the club experienced a range of (unnecessary) venues of the period, particularly those that catered to gender-variancy and/or poor and/or queer individuals or color communities. In the case of the club I was a study in, the large majority had been irretrievable to local agençies seeking to manage and to manage and the sexuality of all this society documenting the legal battle between the clubs proprietor and the local authorities. These documents enabled me to see how the clubs owner and patrons were vilified and mischaracterized by officers intent upon rooting out satanic worship and rampant drug use. Reports of undecover police operations offered particularly vivid and detailed evidence of the owners' contemptuous assertions that the club had been unjustly targeted because it was queer.

I think the argument holds up, and I also know that my stake in making it was not simply intellectual. This place made me who I am today; the bounce-fattening bass beats were a physical manifestation of an even more powerful, self-conquering social world. My best friend and I grew up in a small, conservative town—on weekend nights we would muster as much coolness as we could and make our way in from our suburban homes. We felt the magic of the club quite powerfully. The darknessounding dance beats, and swift of urban youth mad us feel as if we'd found a portal into a Dead or Alive video. It wasn't simply that gayness was possible at this place—though this was remarkable enough circa 1985 in a conservative corner of the US—it was that everything seemed possible. It would be years

FOR TERENCE AN ESSAY

8. Henry R.L. John, "UK Raave Culture and the Thatcherite Hegemony, 1988-94," Cultural History, 4, no. 2 (September 2015), p.172.

9. Pepper G. Glass, "Doing Scene: Identity, Space, the Interactive Accomplishment of Youth Culture," Journal of Contemporary Ethnography, vol. 41, no. (August 2012), p.705.

10. Burrisch 2022.

11. Philip Hadfield, "From Threat to Promise: Nightrunning, Security, Governance and Consumer Estates, Britain," Journal of Criminology, vol.148 (July 2008), pp.429-.

Such acts of insulation and exclusion are made even more apparent through the officiating structures of venue closure (both routinised—"last orders"—and regularized/stategic—#savenghiflife) and how new social scenes are developed immediately following closure (both routinised—"where's afters?"—and Here, I am gesturing to the structural regularized—24-hour cities/later licence—achieve any sense of boundarics that those highlife navigate to where and when we can chill out. How did you part when the clubs closed during Covid-19? How did such partying support or deny your sense of self as pertains to the boundary-work of our social scenes? Were you ever invited to a party? Did you go?

But such excents their invitation through a homing device; "[The afterparty] is for the ones who don't have a, or ever want to go, home. It is a time for the ones who don't know they have a home."<sup>12</sup>

The first part of this question urges us to consider modes of	selection, control, and segregation	that uphold	the seeming inclusivity of highbrow cultures.	Nightlife is sustained through	a unique	labor of imagined marginality	whereby specific privileges are afforded to a certain number of bodies to insulate their desires and to exclude others.!!
---	-------------------------------------	-------------	---	--------------------------------	----------	-------------------------------	---

In Lieges Burrisch's zinc Hoe Note to Excluded (volume 2 of 3) a question stands out to me under the heading "The Afterparty": "What happens if everyone is invited to the party and even the afterparty?"<sup>10</sup>

EVERYONE IS INVITED

Coke's feelings of "collective anger" and helpllessness" in witness-ing a party felt by those participating in a party. This plurality of "imagined marginalisation" provides us with another key example of the boundary-work a play in distilling the cultural effects of after parties symbolically disentan-gled "other." Both participants either side of this boundary is a frustrated and normalative regimes of time. He feels marginalize from his center while highlighting his central position of privilege. For those at the Party Coke's and Williams), individualization is secured through the legitimizing participation in the party; this subjective privilege is enabled only through the marginal

What is needed is a way of thinking in the profits made by the organisers. This should discourage the crazies. - Margaret Thatcher (1989)

THE REAL INTRODUCTION WHERE STUFF HAPPENS

In a promotional interview for UK's Boys' Own Records, DJ and producer Andrew Weatherall discusses the growing importance of night-life cultures impact on creative and cultural industries. From noting the club as a primary catalyst for new social groups to form swiftly jumps to drawing our attention to the potential landscapes. It is here, at the after party, where he posts new forms of creative culture that changed our cultural of the after party—the site of chilling out—to create and develop ever new forms of culture to consume, he normally boundary between those who are at restful after-party space is talk. In the interview, he makes clear that you don't go out to talk but instead you go out to consume a delicious mixture of cultural artifacts and it is only after, in the chill, that you can find space to talk to others who have shared the experience and imagine new opportunities. Of these new opportunities he lists clothing brands, new labels, and new producer/artist relationships. This after-party hesitates to mobilize the term "chilling out."

We all joke: no one ever talks at a chill-out and indeed the site of a chill-out has, for those of us who frequent club-land and weekend long parties, traditionally been a site for our bodies to recover from the excesses of alcohol, drugs, and dancing. It has been a site to keep the party going while calming down, together. This is the party going while calming down, together. They were wane after a main event... and alcohol let the effects of drugs to relax and traditionaly referred to as a way of socialising than sexual. They were traditionally social rather than sexual. The term is commonly used to describe a party after clubbing, which includes the continuation of drugs use and sexual behaviour.

ALL TALK

The term "tradition" is doing some complex boundary work here in relation to a signifying practice that would seek to unchart drags and sex from any tradition of leisure. Boundary-work index a participation in often simultaneous production/destruction of boundaries, demarcations, and other divisions in our epistemological spheres. First deployed in the sciences, bit of queer English violence: I want to talk about more about Burrisch's work but first I will enact a more about Burrisch's work but first I will enact a the traumas of sexual and capital violence. I will speak the after party as a homing device to highlight/underline in Burrisch's recent How Not to Extrude, they articulate uncritical yet sustaining modes of knowledge exchange. consumption can reframe queer subjectivities through both the artist and scholar. Liesel Burrisch is akin to how This mode of talking back note take place preceedence in chill-outs will create new note take the "endless chapter" that he and Weatherall in which the clubs make up the after-hours varied semantic structures that make up the ways clubs as visitors, trying to come to grips with the ways "para" means beside and against). He also unpacks the support such recreation from misuse. (As a prefix here, drugs, sex, and gambling. He gestures to how the care because of, in this instance, participation in recreational Williams posits that talking back recuperates those men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Sigma Recsarch, London School of Hygiene & Tropical Drug use in sexual settings among gay and bisexual men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Adam Bourne et al., "The Chmsx Study:

6. Liesel Burrisch, How Not to Extrude (Berlin: Gorilla Milk, 2022), available at shop.gorilla-milk.net/product/

7. Urban Pamphlet, no. 7 (July 2018), available at urbanpamphlet.org/grey-time-space-past-present-future/

8. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie (University Press, 2020), p. 16.

9. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie (Columbia University Press, 2014), p. 6.

10. Adam Bourne et al., "The Chmsx Study:

11. Ibid.

12. Williams posits that talking back recuperates those transcribed with emphasis added by the author. "Boys Own Records feature," Sun TV, ep. 8, by DEF II youth strand, BBC2, 1991, available at youtu.be/watch?v=yq9DDHgSAk-chainref=immod123.

In this recent ethnography of after-hours clubs in the United States, sociologist Terry Williams notes that this mode of talking back speaks to the marginality of after-hours clubs and after-hours club spaces play an important function in any society—they are "facilitating a way of life" in their respective socio-cultural situations.<sup>4</sup>

TALKING BACK I

I want to quickly read Weatherall's hesitation—this admission and then acceptance of the chill-out—as a mode of talking back that speaks to the marginality within the context of the study, demonstrates an incapacity for those critics but instead our bodies to marginalize such activity in and of leisure in terms of our access to such structures and our work in

them in ways that might talk back to culture at large. to not moralize such practices but instead to care for after the party is over. Such boundary-work, especially within the context of the study, demonstrates an incapacity how we think about leisure practices like a mode of talking back that speaks to the marginality of after hours. Further I want to unpack how we seek change how we think about leisure practices like a mode of talking back that speaks to the marginality of after hours. Further I want to unpack how we seek to marginalize such activity in and of leisure in terms of our access to such structures and our work in

Williams posits that talking back recuperates those men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Sigma Recsarch, London School of Hygiene & Tropical Drug use in sexual settings among gay and bisexual men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Adam Bourne et al., "The Chmsx Study:

13. Liesel Burrisch, How Not to Extrude (Berlin: Gorilla Milk, 2022), available at shop.gorilla-milk.net/product/

14. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie (Columbia University Press, 2020), p. 16.

15. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie (Columbia University Press, 2014), p. 6.

16. Liesel Burrisch, How Not to Extrude (Berlin: Gorilla Milk, 2022), available at shop.gorilla-milk.net/product/

17. Urban Pamphlet, no. 7 (July 2018), available at urbanpamphlet.org/grey-time-space-past-present-future/

18. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie (Columbia University Press, 2020), p. 16.

19. Terry Williams, Le Boogie Woogie (Columbia University Press, 2014), p. 6.

20. Adam Bourne et al., "The Chmsx Study:

21. Ibid.

22. Williams posits that talking back recuperates those men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Sigma Recsarch, London School of Hygiene & Tropical Drug use in sexual settings among gay and bisexual men in Lambeth, Southwark & Lewisham" (London: Adam Bourne et al., "The Chmsx Study:

TALKING BACK II

I want to quickly read Weatherall's hesitation—this admission and then acceptance of the chill-out—as a mode of talking back that speaks to the marginality within the context of the study, demonstrates an incapacity how we think about leisure practices like a mode of talking back that speaks to the marginality of after hours. Further I want to unpack how we seek to marginalize such activity in and of leisure in terms of our access to such structures and our work in

them in ways that might talk back to culture at large. to not moralize such practices but instead to care for after the party is over. Such boundary-work, especially within the context of the study, demonstrates an incapacity for those critics but instead our bodies to marginalize such activity in and of leisure in terms of our access to such structures and our work in it has become a useful framework for the labor of our discourse in the social sciences when we seek to codify various counter/subcultural realities. In this case, "all talk" means a performative encounter with bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other are of course immediately brought to the fore and so are relationships to in-group/out-group, inside/outside, and hierarchical in classes

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

bodies to achieve coherence. Binaries of self/other

are relationships to

are of course immediately brought to the fore and so

Binary Line

Through Clarity's movement and distinct control of the camera gaze she completes a convincing capture and queering of the excluding nature of not only the club but also the art institution.

Bring Time dwells on the fluid, time-consuming structures of the pre- and afterparty. For Burisch, this is where friendships are made, conflicts are healed and shoulelders can be lowered after a long night on the dance floor – contrary to the party itself where the music is loud and expectations must be met. This is where a conversation about what kind of world we envision together. As a rift on the XY.O.B. party invitation, Bring Time is Burisch's mantra for the great afterparty: bring the time – take your time for yourself and be who you want to be.

This publication is part of a series that O—Overgaden has produced since 2021 as an independent and customized supplement for the artist's solo shows. The publications are made through generous support from the Augustinus Foundation for which we are extremely grateful. I wish to thank the Danish Arts Foundation, Stiftning Kunstdonds and Øens Murcriftma for their talent and Lisa Arellano for their contributions that in different ways reflect on the spaces and potentialities of the queer club as well as its histories and archives. Also a warm thank you to O—Overgaden's in-house editor Nanna Friis who edited this publication and to the rest of the O—Overgaden team who made this exhibition possible in collaboration with Licetel Burisch. A big and heartfelt thank you to Licetel Burisch for marking so strongly the importance of inclusive communities where racism, discrimination, homophobia, and social and bodily discrediting normalize, uppercasing cultures where racism, sexism, heteronormativity, and social and bodily stigma prevails – not least in highlife.

The exhibition is created as a total installation, mimicking the architecture of the rave with provisional scaffolding and walls plastered with posters. The video piece Never Stop is central, displayed on two large screens and shot at various bars, clubs and private homes. In this video we meet Don and Jess, who through dialogue and dance show us glimpses from the intimate slowness of pre-partying, the freedom and collectiveness of dancing, and the afterparty's deep, dreamy conversations. They share experiences from the club scene and dream about unjolidding the muscles freely without neighbours. Their movements and fragmentation limit their prejudices and complementing conversations, preserving the hall empty exhibition spaces before the architecture of O-Ovragaden, from the hidden passages to the hall empty exhibition spaces before the architecture of O-Ovragaden, almost ghostlike, around Claire moves compellingly, Dancer Maji - presents the opposite gaze: the dream. Don and Jess video's narratives - shot with a drone at O-Ovragaden - appears documenting artist in its gaze, another of the exhibits space. While the story of Don and Jess exhibition score that slowly and hypnotically fills up the echo chamber with an electronic, bass-heavy conversations blend with the heavy.

EAN: 9788794311045

Bring Time
hibition period: 11.06.2022 – 07.08.2022

FOREWORD

www.nature.com/scientificreports/

